

Part 2

You will hear a talk about Hugh Munro, an important figure in the history of mountain climbing in Scotland. For questions 7–14, complete the sentences.

HUGH MUNRO AND MOUNTAIN CLIMBING IN SCOTLAND

Hugh Munro was asked to provide a

7 of the highest mountains in Scotland.

The mountain areas had previously been used mostly for 8 and cattle farming.

In the nineteenth century, road and rail links to the Highlands were developed and 9 were produced.

In the 1930s, the growth of leisure activities such as hiking and 10 gave more access to mountain areas.

In the 1930s, unemployed people from the shipbuilding and 11 industries took up climbing.

Some people who were short of money had to use

12 to get to the mountains.

Today, the challenge of climbing all Munro's mountains is known as 13 the Munros' by climbers.

The speaker uses the phrase

14 to describe the recent popularity of climbing Munro's mountains.